

Arizona Silver Belt.

THURSDAY, JUNE 27, 1878

Devoted to the general interests of the Territory and more particularly to that of its mineral resources.

The appointment of John Wasson as Surveyor General of this Territory was confirmed.

The country is greatly relieved by the announcement that Congress has adjourned.

We have seen no confirmation of the announcement in our last of the threatening aspect between this country and Mexico.

A statue commemorative of the virtues of William Cullen Bryant, editor and poet, is in contemplation to be erected in one of the New York city parks.

Arrangements for the proper celebration of the 4th of July are occupying the attention of the various committees. We anticipate a good time and feel assured that nothing will occur to depreciate the public stock of patriotic pleasure.

Globe, just now is experiencing an afflux of immigration. The outside world, since the establishment of a newspaper here, is evidently aware of the fact that we have silver mines that will do to bet on. Recent arrivals are but the beginning of the end.

We call attention to the card of Hon. H. S. Stevens announcing himself as a candidate for re-election to congress. Mr. Stevens, we presume is now on his way from Washington with a view of meeting his constituents and urging his claim to their suffrage.

The clause in the army appropriation bill transferring the Indian bureau to the military was stricken out. The knowledge of the fact will be as gratifying to the army as to the citizens living in the vicinity of the San Carlos. The Indians of that reservation are contented as now governed, but fear the stricter discipline of the army.

A soaking rain fell upon Pueblo Viejo valley and further down the Gila on the 19th which gladdened the hearts of residents of those sections. Farmers on the Gila are now harvesting wheat and barley. Crops are good. New potatoes are plenty, as also other vegetables. Lacy, who has just returned from Safford, purchased while there, 20,000 pounds of new barley. He brought to this place 3,000 pounds and will shortly bring more.

A trial of skill is to take place in Silver City on the 4th by the Georgetown, Fort Bayard and Silver City rifle clubs. Lacy belongs to the latter, which accounts for his constantly cocking his eye and sighting things. He will participate and is confident of striking the bulls-eye every pop. Perhaps, by the time his score is announced, he may be willing to acknowledge that "the longer time wat a man lives the more things by the holy poker he finds himself out."

Peter Rockwell, one of Brigham Young's Destroying Angels, who was under indictment in Utah for the murder of the Aiken party of emigrants in 1857, and was to have been tried at the September term of the First District Court, died in Salt Lake City on the 9th inst. It is supposed that his sudden taking off was the work of some of his fellow-Danites, who either feared he might peach or that his trial might reveal some ugly facts that might furnish more food for the executioner's rifle-men.

We are in receipt of a communication which opposes the creation of a new county embracing Globe district at the present time. The expense of the erection of county buildings and the payment of county officers, which would necessarily increase taxation, are the objections to a separate county organization, but the writer does not object to the change when citizens are more patriotic in pocket and able to stand the cost.

The legislature, if asked, will have to decide the matter, not the voters further than to make it a question, if thought best, in the election of representatives from Pinal county to that body.

Boreas on a Bender.

Great atmospheric disturbances, which in former years were chiefly confined to the tropics, have become far to common in the West and Southwestern States to render a home there desirable. One of those rotary storms has recently passed over Richmond, Ray county, Missouri. It swept through the central portion of the town leveling everything with the ground for a breadth of 300 yards, and even stripping trees of their bark and foliage. Many persons were killed and others wounded, some fatally. This is the second appalling cyclone that has passed over Richmond. A former one about eight years since done great damage.

Can it be that the citizens there have neglected their religious duties? Morehead received his religious training there, and from his proficiency in biblical literature we are more than disposed to believe that Aholas was not moved in that behalf for any neglect of their observance of the requirements of the decalogue. No doubt ministers there will avail themselves of the occasion and impress their hearers with the belief that they have incurred the Divine displeasure for not having been more regular in their attendance at church and more earnest and heartfelt in their prayers to Him who directs the winds, "tempers them to the shorn lamb," and magnifies them into irresistible and destructive whirlwinds. Had this storm occurred in choke-cherry time, when religious duties are neglected and persons are given to wandering in the woods on Sunday, we would not have been surprised. Others will attribute the cyclone to natural causes and charge ministers with trying to get up a corner on pew rents by preaching to the fears of their hearers. Bud Jacobs will talk this way. We know Bud. He has stoutly maintained his disbelief in special visitations of Providence ever since the Sabbath afternoon when Morehead lured him from his prepared and fully expected Sunday school lesson, to the creek bottom to throw crab-apples at each other from the switch end of a supple hazel rod. He run a thorn in his foot, while M., the tempter, the one that should have been punished, walked home flat-footed and had no occasion for a rusty bacon pontice, and that's why the leaven of unrighteousness struck in on him, and stayed there.

As for ourselves our heart goes out in sympathy for the people of Richmond who have been bereft of relatives, to wounded sufferers and those who have suffered loss in property, and earnestly hope that this last destructive storm may, when time grows grey with age, be referred to as the very last.

On the 18th at a party given by George Adkins near Camp Thomas, a soldier ran against Frank Montgomery, who resented the insult by knocking the soldier down by striking him on the head with a six-shooter. Shortly afterwards—one or two nights—the soldier with five of his comrades, all armed with carbines, evidently hunting Montgomery, found him at J. Jones' saloon and at once commenced firing at him, mortally wounding him, three shots taking effect in his body. He died in about three hours after the shooting. The officers promptly caused the arrest of such of the soldiers who were known to be guilty and confined them in the guard house. Doubtless, by this time, they are on their way to Tucson where they will be tried for premeditated murder. The case as represented to us admits of no other interpretation.

Without regarding ourself "a whole team and a cross dog under the wagon in an election," we have reason to believe that in our last issue in placing Frank Pierce in the Presidential chair eight years before his nomination and election we performed a great feat. We brought him to the front in 1844 and crowded Jas. K. Polk out of the White House and charged that Frank inaugurated the war of 1846 with Mexico. For the sake of the truth of history we now place Jim eight years ahead of Frank in the order of succession, and hope that there may be no general revision of history in order to conform to the statement of the Bux of the 20th.

The great race on the 4th of July in Louisville, between Ten Broeck the Kentucky horse, and Mollie McCarthy, the California mare, is the absorbing topic of the day. The animals are in good condition and are expected to make better time than any hitherto recorded by any horse, mare or gelding. The respective owners of the contestants have declared their belief by each placing $10,000 in the hands of stake-holders that their cherished property will not be second best. That sum is not a tithe of what is already bet on the result of the race.
